Results

	Raw Score	Clinical OCD Percentile	Normative Student Percentile
Total	16	N/A	N/A
TAF-Moral	10	22.3	22.5
TAF-Likelihood Other	4	43.5	66.6
TAF-Likelihood Self	2	25	31.8

Scoring and Interpretation Information

Raw scores and percentiles for the three subscales are given as output, with higher scores indicating a stronger tendency toward thought-action-fusion like cognitions. For each subscale, percentiles based on a student and clinical sample are computed using Safron et al., (1996) original validation samples. A percentile of 50 for the OCD clinical sample represents the average amount of TAF thoughts that a person with OCD experiences, while a percentile of 50 on the student sample indicates the average TAF thoughts that a relatively healthy individual experiences. Percentiles are not computed for the total score.

The three subscales are as follows:

TAF-Moral – The belief that having an unacceptable thought is the moral equivalent of carrying out the unacceptable or disturbing action.

Sum items: 1, 3, 4, 6, 8, 10, 11, 13, 15, 17, 18, 19

TAF-Likelihood Other – The belief that thinking an unacceptable thought about another person increases the likelihood of that thing happening.

Sum items: 2, 5, 7, 9

TAF-Likelihood Self - the belief that thinking an unacceptable thought about ourselves makes it more likely to occur.

Sum items: 12, 14, 16
