Social (11 items)	27	2.5	17.5

Mean response for each phobic stimuli

Scoring and Interpretation Information

Scores are presented as raw scores for each phobic fear, a mean score and a percentile. The mean score is the raw score divided by the number of items, which represents the average response.

Scoring and Interpretation Information (cont.)

The percentiles are derived from Ashton and colleague's (2008) undergraduate sample (n = 248), where a percentile of 50 represents normal and healthy levels of fear, while percentiles above 75 indicate fear that may interfere with daily life. Percentiles should not be used as the primary method for interpretation as the sample data was skewed.

Scoring for the following scales is computed by adding the following items:

- Blood-Injection Scale: 2, 7, 13, 15, 17, 19, 22, 30, 32, 41
- Bodily Harm Scale: 5, 10, 24, 31, 36, 38, 42, 43
- Social Scale: 3, 6, 16, 18, 27, 28, 33, 34, 35, 39, 45
- Animal Scale: 1, 4, 12, 14, 29, 37, 44, 46
- Physical Confinement Scale: 8, 9, 11, 20, 21, 23, 25, 26, 40
